The Road to Peace.

Our armies have been traveling the high road to peace most successfully for some months past. The news we offer of the utter defeat of General Lee, the rebel Commander in Chief, seems to bring the blessings of peace almost to our doors, and to give the assurance that the rebellion cannot continue a conflict when it is reduced to such shreds [illegible].

Those who indeed love their country and long for its preservation, have cause to be most truly thankful at the reception of such glorious tidings, confirming so fully our hopes and answering so completely our expectations. Greater success we could not have asked, and the only thought that dims the pleasure of the hour comes from the reflection that thousands of brave men and true while winning for us these victories, have fallen in achieving them. There is a glorious memory to be preserved of them for all time. Generations from now, when the history of the great rebellion is written, when rebel valor is respected, while its treason is condemned and only less despised than the Peace Democracy that sympathized with but dared not aid it—then, one of the noblest records of descent an American citizen can claim will be, that his ancestor fell before Richmond.

We have waded through bloody seas to achieve peace, but now the bow of promise spans the cloud. The rebel leaders, infatuated, may still court strife, and lead their misguided followers literally to the last ditch to die, but they fight against hope and cannot struggle long. The probability is that they will soon seek to escape as much from the retribution to be expected from those they have so wickedly misled, and so foully sacrificed, as from the just action of our outraged law. It is safe to leave the completion of the work, now so well along, to Grant and his Generals. There is no possibility of a defeat left. Rebel valor has thrown itself away, and been squandered so remorselessly and unavailingly that with but even forces opposed the prestige of success would give our troops the victory. Demoralization has set in and there is no hope that the rebel soldier, who has naught to fear if he will throw down his arms, will longer have heart to continue a war which is now only as hopeless as it is purposeless.

We have a word to say to the few in our midst who sympathise with treason, and secretly dread to hear that our nation is victorious. We mean those who have no look of joy to light their faces when Richmond falls; no hopes that are realized when peace is won by force of arms. Such there are, who were ever incredulous of Union victories, and who will disbelieve the news until they read the particulars, who prefer rumors that Grant is defeated, and who listen to the unfounded reports that such was the case so greedily as to manifest that the wish was the father to the thought. We give you full particulars of the rebel death blow, and we add our satisfaction, since Providence has willed it, that peace is to be won by the capture of Charleston and Richmond, and the annihilation of the power of the rebellion. It could not in justice have been otherwise.

Up Country Items.—From Colonel Ruckle, lately returned from the upper country, we learn that there was a large fall of snow on the Blue Mountains not more than a week ago. The road to Lewiston was so blocked that stages could not run for several days. There was a body of snow on the foot hills in sight of Walla Walla.

The stages of Thomas & Co's line were several days laid up by the heavy fall of snow and by the effects of an avalanche on the line of the new road from Wallula to Grand Ronde Valley. A large mass of snow started down a steep declivity high up the mountains, acquiring such force and momentum that it continued on for a mile over a very gradual descent, filling the canyon through which the road lay 75 feet deep with a mass of snow and shivered trees torn up on the way.

General Rejoicing.—As our exchanges come to hand we learn that all the towns up the Willamette and Columbia have celebrated the great victory, culminating in the capture of Richmond, with public rejoicing that speaks well for the loyalty of our State and very ill for the future success of the copperhead peace Democracy.

European News.

New York, April 5.—The Etna, from Liverpool March 22d and Queenstown 23d, has arrived. Political news unimportant.

London papers warn the House of Commons of the importance of the vote to be taken on the 23d on the subject of the Canada fortifications.

The Moravian's news caused an improvement in 5-20s.

The London Morning Star in an article on the question of possible repudiation by the United States, asserts that the Washington Government is as incapable of repudiating its obligations as the Government of England.

In the House of Commons, in reply to the enquiry by Gregory as to the protection of British property in the Southern States, Lord —— said that he supposed the question referred to cotton. As regards that destroyed by the Confederates to prevent its falling into Northern hands, the owners must stand it and have no right to complain, but at the same time they have been urged to preserve authentic records of such property. As regards the cotton seized by the Federal Government, they have an undoubted right to remove it to the North, but the British Charge at Washington has been instructed to express a confident hope that no obstacle will be interposed to the claims of British subjects in respect to such cotton.

Berkley again called attention to the probability of a war with America, and complained of the negligence of the Government in not making adequate preparation.

A decision given by the Privy Council in Bishop Colenso's case pronounces his removal from his Bishopric by the Bishop of Cape Town null and void, that power resting with the Queen.

A recent paper asserted that negotiations at Washington between Maximilian's agent and Seward are progressing satisfactorily, and that Lincoln promised to recognize the Empire at the termination of the war.

The Paris Constitutionnel asserts that apprehensions of American aggression in Mexico are chimerical. The relations of France and the United States never appeared to be more satisfactory.

The French Senate adopted the Address by a vote of 130 to 2.

Revolution in New Granada.

New York, April 5.—Panama papers of March 21st were received on the evening of the 31st.

The long looked for revolution has taken place. The Government was quietly overturned. The President [illegible] the place, took refuge in the U. S. Consulate, and escaped at midnight aboard the U. S. steamer St. Mary. Four or five of his soldiers were killed.

The Star and Herald says it was the most peaceful and bloodless [illegible] of Government ever heard of.

Senor [illegible], revolutionist, was duly sworn in as President. On Friday a body of troops were dispatched to Aspinwall to establish the Provisional Government. A small police force opposed them on their arrival. Three of the latter were killed. They then handed the place over to the new Government. Forces had been sent to other places with a similar object in view. No violence was expected. In Panama everything was quiet.

Battle of March 31st before Richmond.

New York, April [illegible].—A special to the [illegible] of Friday night [illegible] at 1 o'clock [illegible] Stagg's brigade [illegible] was sent [illegible] supported by [illegible] brigade, the last [illegible] near Stony Creek, where [illegible], which was held by the enemy. We tried to take this the day before [illegible] Stagg's Michigan Brigade was [illegible] Gravelly Branch [illegible] The enemy moved three columns across the creek at three points at once, with superior numbers, and was enabled to flank Davis' brigade [illegible] with [illegible] changed their respective positions to meet the charge of the enemy. The fight continued until 4 o'clock, at which time the enemy was driven back. Fitzhugh's and Stagg's brigades passed back in a north-easterly direction on the Boydston road a little north east from Dinwiddie Court House, on which this portion of the column moved during the evening. Gibbs' brigade for a long time held its position [illegible] several charges, in one of which several hundred rebels threw down their arms and attempted to rush into our lines. Unfortunately the movement was not generally observed in season to prevent a volley being opened on them, which [illegible] long enough to enable their officers to cover them with a fire from the rear. At [illegible] Gibbs had fallen back to within a mile of Dinwiddie Court House, and was here relieved by our [illegible] brigade which was soon strengthened by the arrival of Col. Pennington with part of his brigade. The enemy did not advance to hold the ground, when Custar came to the front and a scene of the wildest excitement prevailed.

Sheridan and Custar with their staffs bore [illegible] along the line with their respective colors displayed. This demonstration elicited renewed enthusiasm along the entire line. The enemy charged several times and were repulsed with great slaughter [illegible] and did not attempt to force our lines again.

Of the result of Friday's fighting, the Times says:

We swung our left forward three miles north of the Boydston Road, leaving between it and the South Side railroad but a single line of earth-works thrown up since Monday night. We captured 1,000 prisoners. Our loss was not over 2,000 in the aggregate, and the enemy have suffered much more heavily, and they are now becoming demoralized very rapidly. In the evening they could not be induced to make another charge against the 5th corps, although they had fought desperately.

The Herald's special of the 31st says: When forward movements commenced, the 5th corps moved south west across Hatcher's Run, and then north west to the Quaker Road and the Boydston plank road, between Gravelly and Hatcher's Run.

The 2d corps crossed Hatcher's Run simultaneously and moved up the south side of the creek towards the Boydston Road. The 24th corps was put into the place occupied by the 2d, and assisted in preserving the main line. [illegible] was also in position as a reserve. Sheridan in the meantime had moved his entire cavalry command to Dinwiddie Court House on the South Side railroad and the enemy's right flank.

At dark, on the evening of March 30th, the left of the second corps halted at the Boydston plank road, a mile north of the bridge across Hatcher's Run. The fifth corps had passed nearly due west, and lay fronting northward. On the morning of the 31st, the rebel troops fell on the left of the fifth corps and caused great confusion. Ayres' division is reported to have been driven back; Crawford's division was thrown into great confusion and driven back pell mell for at least a mile and half. It was finally reformed beyond the Boydston road, and by half past four in the afternoon, had not only regained the lost ground, but had established two breastworks on the White Oaks, in front of Ayres' position. The troops that behaved so unmanfully at first, behaved like veterans at last. Last evening our left flank reached some distance on the White Oak road. From that point our line ran on a regular semicircle to the twenty fourth corps.

Sheridan's Generalship.

New York, April 7.—The World's account of Sheridan's generalship says it will take rank with any on record. It seems that Grant was not satisfied with Friday's work and placed Sheridan in supreme command of the Army Corps and all the cavalry. Sheridan charged with his cavalry, dismounting a portion of the rebels, and gradually pursued them back to their works amid the most terrible and desperate fighting of the war. While this was being done, Sheridan was also forming the infantry, showing the same generalship in infantry tactics that he has shown in cavalry. It was a noble sight to see so handsome a force of cavalry press back and hold in check 60,000 infantry, and they did it in such a manner as to completely dispense with the use of our infantry. They were moving back step by step into their works. The signal was then given and the infantry closed on their works like a huge barn door. The rebels saw their position, but did not appear to appreciate how desperate was their situation. They fled back to the left only to see the close advance of our infantry drive them across the field to the right. Our horsemen [illegible] them in their vain attempt to fight it out on the road, and the cavalry began to assemble. Soon a cross fire rolled along, cutting down their officers and strewing the field with bleeding men. Their own artillery was turned on them at last; the cavalry charged down upon them, scaring and trampling them into confusion. They had no commanding officers to lead them out of the trouble into which they had fallen. A command to the surrender was given, and 5,000 men were Sheridan's prisoners. Those who escaped were pursued by the cavalry far into the desolate forest.

Great and Final Battle before Richmond on Sunday, April 2d.

Headquarters, Army of the Potomac, April 2.—The outer line of works, which we have been trying in vain for months to overcome, have at last yielded to our victorious army. The struggle by the enemy to retain possession of these works has been of the most desperate character. Orders of an attack on the line east and south of Petersburg by the sixth and ninth corps were carried out precisely at daylight, the artillery having been pounding away for the greater part of the night along the entire line [illegible] the advance of the tenth corps. The troops engaged in the action were the second and third [illegible], and a brigade of the first division. A charge was made in front of Worth's Hill [illegible] the Jerusalem road and by [illegible] o'clock we were in possession of the fortifications of Fort Mahone, being the most formidable and extensive. The works consisted of fourteen guns, some of which were at once turned on the enemy. [illegible] hundred yards from Fort Mahone, was another work, to which the rebels retreated, from whence they threw a most destructive fire on our men, causing them to retreat from the northern ends, when the rebels made a dash, thinking to re-take it entirely. The guns on the right wing, as well as those in the center, had been [illegible] spiked. The assaulters were driven back from the lines until late in the afternoon, the enemy using every effort to retake the fort. About noon [illegible] should lose it, but soon after the movement [illegible] and the [illegible] brigades and a brigade of the eighth corps came on the ground and saved the gallant men from a defeat, and again caused the enemy to retreat. The fighting here was of the most terrible and fearful kind. [illegible] Gen. Wilcox, with a part of his troops, [illegible] an attack [illegible] of Gen. Meade, near the Appomattox, and broke part of the line, but he was soon after compelled to retreat to his former position, owing to a lack of support. We lost of the eighth corps [illegible] 1,000 killed, wounded and prisoners, among whom was Gen. Porter, [illegible] who was badly wounded in the groin.

The sixth corps [illegible] the enemy in front of Fort Welch, near the celebrated [illegible] works, and carried them, with very slight loss, and [illegible] pushed forward to the South Side railroad [illegible]. In a very short time [illegible] miles of [illegible] was torn up and destroyed. They then moved down towards Petersburg, driving the rebels before them. Very close to the city we took 1,000 prisoners and 20 guns. The [illegible] corps holding the line north of Hatcher's Run, connecting with the [illegible] corps [illegible] right, and the 2d corps on the left, advanced at daylight and took the works in their front with slight loss. [illegible] 1,000 prisoners were captured here. The several corps who held the line from the Run, a

New York Tribune's Account.

New York, April [illegible].—The Tribune's correspondent [illegible] the operations on [illegible].

At [illegible] on Sunday morning, April 2d, the 6th corps left its lines to attack the enemy's center. It moved [illegible] the corps to throw its left flank upon the works of the enemy one after another. Soon a battery [illegible] guns [illegible] the first division [illegible] rapid charge by the first brigade it was captured. The batteries of the enemy now opened from every point, but on went our gallant braves. The first soon reached some works in the rear [illegible] ere they fell into our hands. At 10 o'clock a grand picture of war presented itself, and our line of corps with its left in advance, was sweeping on towards two heavy forts. The rebels plied their guns vigorously and shells burst thickly over our line. On pushed the left division until it struck the South Side railroad and again it swept [illegible] the second division. Our artillery played upon the forts from commanding positions incessantly, until our men were close up to them. Then a dash made upon the works was repulsed. Again it was tried, and this time met with success, but so resolute were the rebels inside, that some of them used the bayonet for a short time.

As these works fell into our hands a loud cheer rent the air and the enemy were seen hastily retreating to the second line, which ordered [illegible] in the effort to stay our advance. While this hot fighting was taking place, the Fifth Corps and the cavalry under Sheridan turned the right wing of the rebel army, taking a [illegible] The Second Corps connecting with the right of the Fifth, was also [illegible] tough ground to fight over, and a [illegible] the rebels' [illegible] The line of defence in front of the Ninth Corps was stronger than those at any other point, and the corps [illegible] during the day [illegible] In the fight it found itself close up to the main line of defences, but unable to go further. Capture of Petersburg. Surrender of the City.

Petersburg, April 3.—The Army of the Potomac has been in and out of Petersburg this morning, making flying visits. The rebels commenced evacuating last night at [illegible] o'clock, and by three this morning were across the river, having burned about a million dollars worth of tobacco, the South Side railroad depot and the bridge across the Appomattox. Our troops charged the inner line of works at daylight, taking a picket line of some 500 men. The troops on entering the city behaved most admirably. Not more than a half dozen stores were entered by them. Most of these contained tobacco, cigars and liquors. The Provost Guard soon arrived and established order. The Mayor of the town met the troops as they entered and handed to the officer commanding the following communication:

Lieut. Gen. Grant, Commanding the Armies of the United States and Major General Commanding the United States forces in front of Petersburg: The city of Petersburg having been evacuated by the Confederate troops, we, a committee authorized by the Common Council, do hereby surrender the city to the United States forces with a request for the protection of private property of its inhabitants. (Signed) N. H. [illegible], Mayor. DAVID PAUL.

Protection was promised on the part of the troops and the citizens have no cause of complaint. There is no instance on record where an army after lying so long in front of a place of so much importance, and losing so many men in efforts to capture it, have entered a city with less strife and doing less damage to private property than in this case. The citizens did not show themselves in the fore part of the day, but after discovering that our troops were orderly and meant to behave themselves, showing no disposition to disturb or annoy any one, they began to make their appearance at the doors and windows of their houses. Later in the day many expressed their joy that the Confederates had gone, hoping the war would soon be over. For more than a month past the rebel troops have been receiving less rations than ever before, on [illegible] just enough [illegible] to live [illegible] day [illegible]. The inhabitants say they have suffered much.

The rebels managed to [illegible] away with all their artillery excepting [illegible] and a few heavy mortars which they could not transport readily. A large number of men deserted and hid in the town until our troops entered, when they made their appearance and were taken in custody. It is believed the rebels retreated towards Lynchburg and Danville.

Description of the Defences of Richmond.

The works in front of Richmond consist of three strong lines wholly enveloping the city. The outer ones are continuous, and the others [illegible] consisting of a series of strong redoubts and abattis forts. All of these mount towards [illegible] three hundred guns, and would, if [illegible] been properly garrisoned, form [illegible] almost [illegible] series of [illegible] strewn [illegible] the ground [illegible] safety [illegible] the hasty night [illegible] saving the lives of many of our men when marching over [illegible] The second was constructed [illegible] the first, [illegible] abattis and [illegible] is just outside the [illegible] on high ground. These works, like others, mount heavy guns.

Richmond Under Union Rule. Lincoln visits the late Rebel Capital.

New York, April 6.—The Herald's [illegible] dispatch from Richmond on Monday says [illegible] was confined mainly to the tobacco warehouses. The reception of the Union troops was [illegible] beyond all expectations, and that there were large numbers of Unionists in the city. Many flags were displayed.

Washington, April [illegible].—On Sunday night, before the occupation of Richmond, the rebels blew up the forts and rams on the James river. A dispatch of the [illegible] says that a detachment of General Riley's command, was sent on a reconnoissance yesterday beyond Little river. They found the enemy's cavalry [illegible] and drove them back three miles, returning with our loss [illegible]. The [illegible] forces are [illegible].

THE SURFACE OF STREETS IN [illegible]. — On Saturday night, in the regular adjourned [illegible] of the Common Council, Mr. Frazar submitted [illegible] to the committee on streets and public property, relative to the [illegible] improvement of Front street, which recently [illegible] upon the [illegible] in which it [illegible] nothing [illegible] from the property holders [illegible] [illegible] from the centre of [illegible] street to the centre of [illegible] street, and [illegible] to Harrison street [illegible] plank, brick or asphaltum. [illegible] of any contemplated improvement [illegible] the new city charter.

[illegible] Mr. [illegible] the Council [illegible] the charter, and the report [illegible] the character of [illegible] of the [illegible] asphaltum, and thought the [illegible] where it should be put down, would [illegible] a very uneven street.

Mr. [illegible] thought, regarding the style of the [illegible], that it should be made to conform with the [illegible] of work [illegible] on the carriage-way. He was [illegible] portion of the report relating to [illegible] walks, and amending the [illegible] adoption of the Ordinance required [illegible] of the charter.

Mr. Frazar stated in explanation, that the phraseology of the report was for the purpose of [illegible] work contemplated [illegible] would be authorized [illegible] business part of the street.

Mr. McCraken read section 78 of the charter [illegible] the general authority of the Council [illegible] which includes the power and authority to improve the sidewalks, and to determine for everything [illegible] necessary concerning such improvement. He also [illegible] section 80 of the charter, which provides that the notice, as given by the Council, must specify, with [illegible] certainty the street or part thereof and the [illegible] of improvement which is proposed to be made. [illegible] Council agree upon a uniform system and adopt [illegible] thought the subject was an important one, [illegible] loopholes for adjacent property owners [illegible] of. The parts of sidewalks to be planked, the [illegible] brick and the parts asphaltum should be designated.

Mr. Gilmore favored the laying over of the [illegible] wouldn't be much, and it would give the Council [illegible] the matter. [They have already had [illegible] under the new charter, and not a spoonful [illegible] has been lifted. — REP.]

Mr. Frazar thought so much as related to side walks in the "notice" might be stricken out, and the balance [illegible] in the newspaper, according to the requirements of the charter.

Mr. McCraken thought differently, whatever the Council [illegible] it should be so as to avoid difficulty. [illegible] owners of property to be found who would not improve [illegible] if they could possibly avoid it.

Mayor Failing asked leave to make a few remarks, whereupon Mr. Gilmore took the Chair.

Mr. Failing thought the matter of street improvement at present rested with the Council. The Board should adopt some system of improvement that should be permanent and lasting. The language of the charter on this subject may be considered by many ambiguous, but it is not so much so but that, upon direct interpretation there was sufficient authority to be obtained for a good and substantial improvement of the city thoroughfares. The conflict of opinion between the Council and the property owners, arose from a dread of the latter to pay for the work authorized by the former. It was not asserted but that the improvements were necessary, but it was the case of the main. Street improvements at best were expensive matters, but he should consider it wise on the part of the Council to definitely settle upon the best method of such work, next to carefully prepare estimates of the cost, and without asking this or that man what he wanted, proceed according to the direction of the charter. Should the property holders legally remonstrate, at that stage of the proceeding, then the Council would be guiltless in the matter. He made some allusion to the cost of the cobble-stone pavement, and in order that the expense of such an improvement might be reduced, or in fact any other kind of improvement, recommended that the Council include a greater width of side-walk. The recommendation was based upon the opinion that such would eventually have to be the case, that our side walks were now too narrow at least for the business streets, and at the time permanent improvements are authorized it would be proper to consider the matter. The Mayor hoped that when the Council have prepared the Ordinance, and passed it, for such an important work no further delays would be made.

After some further remarks on the subject it was voted, upon an amendment offered by Mr. McCraken, that the entire [illegible] be re-committed to the committee on streets and public property.

BULLS AND BEARS. — On Saturday last the speculators in legal tender notes were busy in ferreting out rumors that the great news we had been treated to was a hoax. The most extraordinary reports were in circulation, one of which being that, instead of the downfall of Richmond Grant had lost thirty thousand men, and was himself taken prisoner. The credulous portion of the community partly believed the absurd rumors, and it operated on the copperheads like magic. They revived much under the glowing [illegible], to their benighted hearts, but will not feel so liberal to-day. It will punish some of them to part with the cash they were foolish enough to [illegible] their opinions with, as the strength of the rumors of Saturday [illegible] who very anxiously attempted to [illegible] the legal tender market, did not always meet with a ready customer. [illegible] asked another, in our presence: "Got any green backs?" "Yes!" "What'll ye take for 'em?" "Dollar-'n-a-half!" was the emphatic rejoinder, indicating that as green as the currency might be a lighter spark [illegible] the mind of the holder, and he held them at a figure to be on the safe side at least.

THE LADIES AGAIN. — The old fellow that wisely concluded that this world would have been of little account without the "wimmin," should have seen the ladies of the Christian Commission, handing around the ice cream the other evening, to understand their true value and what "handy" creatures they are. That pleasant gathering in the vestry room of the Presbyterian Church on Friday evening was a perfect success. Quite a nice sum was raised, as we mentioned Saturday, everybody had a nice time and the soldiers will reap the benefit. So everybody bear it in mind, for we understand our "wives and sweethearts" intend to repeat the effort for the same good cause.

WEATHER, &c. — The sun never shone more resplendent, melody never reverberated more sweet, and hearts unfettered from the dismal spell of Winter never joined in praise of Spring more joyfully than the past few days have testified for us of the vicinity within our jurisdiction. The nights have been chilly, and ice has formed on the shady side of [illegible], from the going down of the sun, but it leaves no chill in the hearts of the people loyal to God and their country. Heaven Grant that it may continue!

PASSENGERS AND TREASURE. — The steamers Julia and Wilson G. Hunt during the past week have been constantly employed in the trade of the O. S. N. Co., between this city and the Cascades, carrying at least 1,250 passengers, [illegible] stock, and large amounts of freight. Returning the Hunt has brought to our city for Wells, Fargo & Co. alone not less than $100,000 in treasure.

HABEAS CORPUS DISMISSED. — In chambers Judge E. D. Shattuck, of the Circuit Court, has dismissed the petition of J. McBride for the custody of Lydia and Walter McBride — wife and son of plaintiff — against E. Sutherland, and the parties are remanded without prejudice to any future proceedings for the custody of the child.

ONE OF THE SUFFERERS. — The young man Pleasants so badly wounded at Salem a few days since, arrived in this city on Saturday to have his eyes attended to by Dr. Watkins. One eye is totally destroyed but the Doctor gives him some hope that the other may be of use to him.

COMMERCIAL. — The steamer Pacific leaves this afternoon at four o'clock. The bark Jane A. Falkinburg put to sea Saturday at five o'clock A. M. A schooner is in the river, bound up, for a cargo for Tillamook.

THE NEWS. — In addition to the interesting news, published last evening in the form of an extra, our telegraphic columns will be found to contain very much that is important.

IN NEW YORK. — From private sources we learn that our townsman, Mr. A. B. Elfelt, is in New York city, en route to his home. He has been absent from the city since June last.

Prof. Halstead's Girl.

[illegible] "I was [illegible]"

[illegible] said the girl [illegible] bell.

[illegible] the thing, Bridget [illegible] the thing for a poor girl to be [illegible] living decently and honestly [illegible] got out of the [illegible] with Barbie [illegible] she was the [illegible] nothing to say to [illegible] that clear stre[illegible]

"Does your father know of this, Barbie," [illegible]

[illegible] and were all [illegible] with the [illegible] She persisted in being Biddy even to him, and [illegible] distress between [illegible] very different from that between him and Biddy [illegible] proper self. [illegible] the kitchen, [illegible] betraying Biddy's secret, which he would [illegible] a great deal.

It was several hours before he could return to the house, [illegible] having joined him, and [illegible] they [illegible] together, silence and sitting [illegible] in a most unruly [illegible] undergone such a remarkable renovating process that old Joel drew back at first thinking he had got into somebody else's house instead of his own. Supper was smoking on the table, such a supper as he had not seen for months. To crown all Mrs. Shellenbarger was sitting, propped with pillows in a great easy chair, and looking wonderfully contented, and with reason—the poor lady had not had a woman's hand about her before since her illness. They lived in such an isolated and [illegible] manner, that very few of their neighbors ever knew that Mrs. Shellenbarger was not as well as [illegible] Biddy, as she called herself, had [illegible] the poor lady up in a wonderful manner.

Joel Shellenbarger sat down to the daintily spread table, [illegible] a most hearty and [illegible] glancing askance at Biddy [illegible] while Anson, strange to say, ate very little, and [illegible] Biddy askance [illegible]

This was only the beginning of reforms this daring girl instituted. First, however, as much perhaps for her own peace of mind as Anson's—knowing that mother and son were fast friends and always of one mind—she told her secret to Mrs. Shellenbarger, and fairly wheedled the good lady into approval. It is true that she shook her head at first, and looked wondrously shocked. But it was so charming to have those soft little hands fluttering about her, and to see such bright ness and comfort springing up around that, she could not for her own sake, help countenancing as much as silence could, Biddy's mysterious presence.

I haven't time to give you all particulars, but having made so good a beginning, with a true Irish [illegible], Biddy established herself in a very short time completely in the graces of the old man. He had a lurking likeness for neatness and order, and Mrs. Shellenbarger—poor lady!—wasn't a very tidy house-keeper. Under the new reign order grew out of chaos; the house seemed in holiday garb all the time, and an atmosphere of social cheerfulness pervaded everything.

One morning—Biddy had said something about leaving the day before—the old man ended a grumbling complaint to Anson with "I never see no good come of eddication yet. If it hadn't been for that college business you might have taken a liking to a sensible girl, and she to you." He signaled at Biddy as he spoke. She turned scarlet, and came near dropping the dish she was holding. It was not the first time Anson had heard such insinuations, and he rather enjoyed them.

"See here father," he said [illegible], "just you pick me out a wife, and see what will come of it."

"The only girl I know of worth having won't have you I dare say—would you, Biddy?" Joel said grumbling, but suddenly turning to the girl.

Anson was smiling maliciously. Bridget O'Flynn had kept Barbie's lover at a most tantalizing and [illegible] distance all this time. How was taking his revenge now. Making a desperate effort, Biddy raised her confused senses to say, with considerable self possession,

"Shure, sir, an' it isn't myself that'll be after having any man till I'm asked."

"Biddy, will you marry me?" said Anson gravely, extending his hand.

"I will that, now," said Biddy, promptly putting her hand in his, while old Joel came near choking with amazement. It was too late to recede, however, whether he had really wished such a thing or not, as they soon made him understand. He went out of doors [illegible], and privately pinched himself to ascertain if he were in his senses or not. Seeing the two standing by the window in close conversation soon after, he [illegible] with the same laudable intention toward them under the cover of the bushes that grew by the house.

"Now, Barbie," Anson was saying laughingly, "what is to be done next? I must say you have managed wonderfully so far; but what do you suppose he'll say when he knows you are not Biddy at all?"

"Not Biddy at all!" screamed Joel Shellenbarger struck with a sudden suspicion of he knew not what, as he started out of his covert.

There stood Biddy, the white frill of her rose cap as innocent as ever. She laughed though, when she saw him, and deliberately taking off her cap, shook her bright curls all about her face, and reaching toward him her little hands, said archly, "Shure, sir, an' ye wouldn't be after hatin' a poor girl because her name's Barbie Halstead instead of Biddy O'Flynn?"

"You? you Professor Halstead's girl?"

"Professor Halstead is my father, sir," said Barbie in her natural tones.

"What's that?"

Barbie repeated it.

"And you're not Irish?"

"Never a bit!"

The old man stood a moment, clouds gathering in his face.

"Well, Anson," he said, rather surlily, "you've outwitted me again—much good may it do you. You'd better get out the horses now, and take Halstead's girl home. He must want to see her by this time."

"Yes, sir." And Anson colored with mingled anger and amusement.

Barbie did not change countenance, however. Extending that pretty hand of hers again, she said sweetly, "you'll shake hands with me, sir."

Joel Shellenbarger turned back and gave his hand awkwardly. The girl took it in both of hers, raising her bright, arch face, toward him and saying, "I shall come back some time. Will you be glad to see me?"

Joel hummed and yawned, and stammered out at last, "Yes, yes, come back, Biddy—I mean, Miss O'Flynn, I mean Miss——."

"Barbie," suggested the girl quietly.

"Yes, come back, and the sooner the better. There, Anson, make the most of it!"

Barbie did come back, in a very few weeks, too, and nobody was gladder to see her than old Joel, though he was a little shy at first of Professor Halstead's girl. She soon made him forget, however, everything save that she was Anson's wife; and the way he humored the sly puss to sundry grants of money, refurnishing and repairs, &c., I couldn't begin to tell you. But I'd like you to see the Shellenbarger place since Barbie has gone there to live.

Messrs. Tilton & McFarland, Safe Manufacturers, Boston, Mass.

Gentlemen [illegible] representation made by Mr. Lillie, I was [illegible]

So Called "Fire Proof Safes."

On the 15th of February last, a fire occurred in our [illegible] of Buttinger and our own [illegible] our books, papers and [illegible] taken from the ruins, and on opening it we found that Everything had been Destroyed.

We send you the safe with what is left of the papers, and you will see that not one of them is legible or strong enough to [illegible] weight. Having the curiosity to know how our neighbors fared in this fire, we noticed Messrs. [illegible] purchased their safe of TILTON & McFARLAND [illegible] and its contents were found to be

In Perfect Condition.

This led us to further investigation, and we found to our astonishment that, from the large amount of combustible material in Messrs. McK[illegible] cellar—such as lard, [illegible] safe was subjected to a much greater heat [illegible] of our shop, we being in the clothing business and [illegible] in the cellar. There was another of Lillie's safes here subjected to the same fire [illegible] better than ours.

Very respectfully,
Your obedient servants,
(Signed) GEO. L. CHESBORO & CO

"CONSTITUTION WATER,"

THE ONLY REMEDY FOR DISEASES OF THE

BLADDER, KIDNEYS;

Gravel, Dropsical Swellings,

GENITAL DEBILITY, ETC.

THE ASTONISHING SUCCESS WHICH HAS ATtended this invaluable medicine renders it the most valuable remedy discovered. No language can convey an adequate idea of the immediate and almost miraculous change which it occasions in the debilitated and shattered system. In fact, it stands unrivalled as a remedy for the permanent cure of the maladies above-mentioned, and also,

DIABETES, IMPOTENCY,
LOSS OF MUSCULAR ENERGY,
PHYSICAL PROSTRATION,
INDIGESTION,
SEMINAL WEAKNESS,
GLEET, FLUOR ALBUS,

And in every disease [illegible] connected with the disorder [illegible] FUNCTIONS. Persons about to marry, if conscious of any weakness, should take the

CONSTITUTION WATER,

Whether broken down by excess, weak by nature, or impaired by sickness, the unstrung and relaxed organization is at once [illegible], returned and built up! Well may this celebrated medicine be called the

MEDICAL WONDER.

The drooping, trembling victim of depression and debility becomes a new man; he stands erect, he moves with a firm step, his mind, which was previously sunk in gloom, or an almost idiotic apathy, becomes bright and active; and he goes forth regenerated, conscious of new vigor.—The medicine reaches the CONSTITUTION itself, and restores it to its normal condition.

IRRITATION OF THE NECK OF THE BLADDER,
INFLAMMATION OF THE KIDNEYS, AND
CATARRH OF THE BLADDER,
STRANGURY AND BURNING OR PAINFUL
URINATING,
CALCULUS, GRAVEL,
BRICK DUST DEPOSIT, AND MUCOUS
OR MILKY DISCHARGES AFTER URINATING.

For these diseases it is truly a sovereign remedy, and too much cannot be said in its praise. A single dose has been known to relieve the most urgent symptoms. TRY IT, [illegible]

CONSTITUTION WATER.

ALLEN'S

LUNG BALSAM!

The Remedy for Curing

CONSUMPTION, COUGHS, COLDS,

Asthma, Croup,

Diseases of the Throat, Bronchitis, Pains and Oppression of the Chest and Lungs, Difficult Breathing and all the Diseases of the Pulmonary Organs.

ITS ACTION IS EXPECTORANT, ALTERATIVE, SUDORIFIC, SEDATIVE, DIAPHORETIC AND DIURETIC, which renders it one of the most valuable remedies known for curing diseases of the lungs. It excites expectoration, and causes the lungs to throw off the phlegm or mucus; CHANGES THE SECRETIONS AND PURIFIES THE BLOOD; heals the irritated parts, gives strength to the digestive organs, brings the liver to its proper action, and imparts strength to the whole system. Such is the immediate and satisfactory effect, that it is WARRANTED TO BREAK UP THE MOST DISTRESSING COUGH IN A FEW HOURS TIME, if not of too long standing. IT IS WARRANTED to give entire satisfaction even in the MOST CONFIRMED CASES OF CONSUMPTION. IT IS WARRANTED NOT to produce costiveness (which is the case with most remedies) or affect the head, as it contains no Opium in any form. IT IS WARRANTED to be PERFECTLY HARMLESS to the most delicate child, although it is an active and powerful remedy for restoring the system. THERE IS NO REAL NECESSITY FOR SO MANY DEATHS BY CONSUMPTION, when ALLEN'S LUNG BALSAM will prevent it, if only taken in time.

Sold by all Druggists. Price $1 per bottle.

AWARDED THE FIRST PREMIUM

AT OREGON STATE FAIR IN 1864.

Abstract from Examining Committee's Report of the San Francisco "MECHANICS' INSTITUTE INDUSTRIAL EXHIBITION, OF 1864:"

"CLOTHES WRINGERS.—A variety of these excellent Household Helps were found competing for the favor. Though none of them are entitled to a Premium, we consider the EUREKA, exhibited by M. E. [illegible] Bro., worthy of honorable mention." (Note—No premiums were awarded to articles of Eastern [illegible])

The EUREKA CLOTHES WRINGERS are superior to all others in CONVENIENCE and DURABILITY by the use of
